Heirloom is hosting a virtual info session about our company and open roles on March 23, 2022 at 4:00PM PST. I've included a bit more information about us below, along with a link to join the Info session.

About Us

Heirloom's mission is to restore balance to the atmosphere by removing 1 billion tons of carbon dioxide by 2035. The Heirloom team is on a path to creating the world's first sustainable, scalable, and economically viable carbon removal system. Unlike traditional engineered removal solutions, our Nature published technology combines the natural properties of minerals (carbon mineralization) with engineering to provide a low cost path to $50/tCO2 for Direct Air Capture (DAC), the cost at which carbon removal will be transformative.

We are backed by the best climate partners in the world. We’re well funded by investors from Breakthrough Energy Ventures, Prelude Capital, Lowercarbon Capital, ARPA-e and the National Science Foundation. Our early customers include Stripe, Shopify, and Klarna, and we’re building durable partnerships that enable us to tackle this decades-long problem.

Our Commitment to Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion

As temperatures continue to rise, individuals from marginalized communities will face the harshest impacts of climate change. We believe wholeheartedly that building a diverse company is critical to Heirloom’s success. To accomplish this, we've put recruiting, hiring and retaining individuals from underrepresented groups at the top of our priority list. We urge you to apply if you identify as Black, Native Hawaiian or Pacific Islander, American Indian or Alaskan Native, Hispanic or Latino, LGBTQ+ – or with any other underrepresented group – even if you don't tick all the boxes in the description below. We are committed to cultivating a culture of inclusion and equity, starting with our commitment to fostering diversity within our Heirloom team. We are able to grow and learn better with a diverse team, which is exactly what our planet needs.
