The Chemistry Department at Wesleyan University invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor of Chemistry in experimental physical chemistry or inorganic chemistry starting July 1, 2024. The successful candidate will be expected to develop a vibrant, externally funded research program involving both graduate and undergraduate researchers. Candidates should also demonstrate potential for excellence in teaching in the physical chemistry or inorganic chemistry curriculum at both the undergraduate and graduate level. Additional duties include advising and mentoring students and participating in faculty governance at the departmental and university level. Candidates who have demonstrated success in working with diverse populations and whose research could contribute to Wesleyan’s interdisciplinary programs are especially encouraged to apply. Wesleyan is a highly selective liberal arts university that values both scholarship and teaching with an engaged and diverse student body. The department offers doctoral, master’s, and bachelor’s degrees in chemistry and will occupy a new state-of-the-art facility in early 2025. Wesleyan offers competitive salaries, start-up funds, and benefits as well as a generous sabbatical program.

To apply, visit https://careers.wesleyan.edu/postings/9821. Complete applications must include a curriculum vitae, a description of research plans, a statement of teaching philosophy, and the email addresses of three referees who will be contacted for confidential letters of recommendation. In the cover letter, applicants are invited to describe how they will embrace the college's commitment to fostering an inclusive community, as well as their experience working with individuals from historically marginalized or underserved groups. Applications received by September 1, 2023 will receive full consideration. Questions about the application process may be directed to chemistry@wesleyan.edu.
